Everywhere we look, there seems to be more bad news about inflation, rising prices, and supply chain problems. The news can be pretty depressing. not to mention challenging for all of us who are living on a budget. The best way to combat rising inflation is to return to the basics: Know what you are spending your money on, have a long-term investment plan and consider ways to increase your income. Use these tips provided below to help reduce expenses!

Reduce Monthly Expenses:

- Look at your bills, eliminate things you don't need and try to reduce or negotiate the rest.
- Making sure you aren't paying for duplicative services, like entertainment streaming services, for example, can be an easy way to save each month. Other areas where you can shop around for saving can include:
 - Phone
 - Internet
 - Car Insurance
 - Home Insurance
 - Consider things like Facebook Marketplace or other local shopping apps for items like used furniture, home goods or clothing at big discounts

Incorporate Efficiencies:

- Meal planning – plan for nights you're home and days you will need lunches, etc. Incorporate recipes that use the same ingredients to help reduce waste on things like produce.
- Shop online and use pickup services. This will help eliminate non-essential purchases. Use coupons or cashback credit cards to save.
- Combine your trips to help save on time and gas

Earn Extra Cash:

- Sell things you're not using on eBay, Facebook Marketplace, or craigslist.
- There are also lots of side jobs with flexible schedules or that can be done from home.
